

Microteaching Lesson Plan Rubric (An example)

The “A” lesson plan	...describes clearly what the teacher will say and do, what the students are expected to say and do, and the activities in the class. ...has well-developed stages (warm-up, presentation, practice, evaluation) with a variety of appropriate activities. ...includes content which is engaging and interesting for the students to whom the lesson is directed. ...has clear and appropriate objectives for the level and age of the students.
The “B” lesson plan	...describes clearly two of the following three points: what the teacher will say and do, what the students are expected to say and do, and the activities in the class. ...has clear stages (warm-up, presentation, practice, evaluation) with a variety of appropriate activities. ...includes content which is somewhat engaging and interesting for the students to whom the lesson is directed. ...has somewhat clear and appropriate objectives for the level and age of the students.
The “C” lesson plan	...describes two of the following three points: what the teacher will say and do, what the students are expected to say and do, and the activities in the class. ...has clear stages (warm-up, presentation, practice, evaluation) with appropriate activities. ...includes content appropriate for the students to whom the lesson is directed. ...has clear or appropriate objectives for the level and age of the students.
The “D” lesson plan	...describes one of the following three points: what the teacher will say and do, what the students are expected to say and do, and the activities in the class. ...has separate stages (warm-up, presentation, practice, evaluation) with activities. ...includes content somewhat appropriate for the students to whom the lesson is directed. ...has objectives for the level and age of the students.
The “F” lesson plan	...does not describe what the teacher will say and do, what the students are expected to say and do, and the activities in the class. ...does not have well-developed stages (warm-up, presentation, practice, evaluation) with appropriate activities. ...does not includes content appropriate for the students to whom the lesson is directed. ...does not have objectives for the level and age of the students.